Jan Wickman – 15.01.2020

Time and place: 15:15 – 16.45; Room 4A:301A

Title: TRANS* IN SCANDINAVIAN QUEER ACTIVISM OF THE 00S

Bio: Jan Wickman is university lecturer at the Schwedish School of Social Science, University of Helsinki.

Olga Plakhotnik – 29.01.2020

Time and place: 15.30 – 17.00 Online seminar on Zoom: https://kau-se.zoom.us/j/950337985

Title: THE TEMPTATION OF CITIZENSHIP: SEXUAL POLITICS AND LGBT-ACTIVISM IN POST-MAIDAN UKRAINE

Abstract: This seminar is based on my recently accomplished doctoral research project that explores the discourses of sexual citizenship in post-Maidan Ukraine by asking how LGBT+ communities seek to position themselves in relation to hegemonic discourses of state and nationhood. In my study, I reconceptualised the ‘sexual citizenship’ concept (Evans, 1993) by drawing on a feminist (Lister, 2002) and a poststructuralist (Cossman, 2002) account of citizenship and pursuing a decentering approach to the study of sexualities in non-Western societies (Mizielska & Kulpa, 2011). In my presentation, I summarise the findings of my study and develop further queer feminist theorising on citizenship in the Eastern European context.

Bio: Olga Plakhotnik is currently Research Fellow at the Open University (UK) and editor-in-chief of Feminist Critique: East European Journal of Feminist and Queer Studies (Ukraine).

Chris Beasley – 18.03.2020

Time and place: 15:00-17:00, Room 3A340

Title: ‘Theorising social change in Gender and Sexuality: Heterodox Heterosexuality, Heterodox hetero-masculinity’

Abstract: The central intention of this paper is to challenge orthodoxies regarding heteromasculinity—orthodoxies which have tended to constitute it as a static monolith and queer as the only potential site for a less oppressive sexuality. In questioning such orthodoxies, I consider the possibilities for (libidinal) heterodoxy in relation to hetero-masculinity. The term heterodoxy enables thinking about hetero-masculinity differently. In developing an alternative approach to hetero-masculinity, I turn to the question of how a transgressive hetero-masculinity might be conceptualized. Such a question complicates our understandings of gender, sexuality and social change and opens up new more positive theoretical and empirical directions which move beyond existing orthodoxies.

Bio: Chris Beasley is Emerita Professor in the Dept of Politics and International Relations. She is a Fellow of the Australian Academy of Social Sciences and was recently named as the leading researcher in Feminism and Women’s Studies in November 2018 in The Australian’s annual assessment of national Research based on major journal publications in the field (see p. 36). She was founder and inaugural Co-Director of the Fay Gale Centre for Research on Gender (2009-2013), at the University of Adelaide.
Ana Cristina Santos – 15.04.2020

Time and place: 15:00-17:00, Room 3A340

Title: From villain to hero: trans men and non-binary persons as care providers in Southern Europe

Abstract: This seminar explores the role of trans* men and non-binary persons in informal care practices and provision to others. When dominant networks of care fail, informal care becomes a safety blanket, especially in contexts of increasing vulnerability stemming from precariousness and discrimination. This is especially important in Southern Europe, where prejudice based on gender identity remains particularly strong. By placing trans* masculinity at the center of theoretical and political debates about care, we expose the gaps in dominant literature about care which has left little space to consider the significance of gender-based diversity. The embodied experiences of care by trans men and non-binary persons constitute a fundamental political platform to rethink sociologically concepts of care, masculinity and corporal dissidence within the framework of intimate citizenship.

Bio: With a background in Sociology and a PhD in Gender Studies, University of Leeds, Ana Cristina Santos is a Senior Researcher at the Centre for Social Studies, University of Coimbra. She has coordinated a number of research projects on LGBTQI+, gender and intimate citizenship. After being awarded a Research Grant by the European Research Council to lead INTIMATE - Citizenship, Care and Choice: The micropolitics of intimacy in Southern Europe (2014-2019) and acting as Vice-chair of the European Sociological Association Sexuality RN (2012-2016), she is currently the PI in Portugal of CILIA LGBTQI+ Lives, funded by NORFACE (2018-2021), and Diversity and Childhood, funded by the European Commission (2019-2021). Her most recent book is The SAGE Handbook of Global Sexualities (forthcoming, 2 volumes, coedited 2020).

Malin Rönnblom – 29.04.2020

Time and place: 15:00-17:00, Room 3A340

Title: PRIVATE CONSULTANTS DOING PUBLIC WORK - CHALLENGES FOR A WORKING DEMOCRACY

Abstract: The transformation of the forms of governing in Sweden, through the implementation of NPM and other marketized governing models, has been implemented with accelerating speed during the last 30 years, and Sweden is now one of the most privatised countries in the world. One important aspect of this development is the outsourcing of public tasks to private consultants. My presentation starts off by giving a short presentation of a study that focused on the outsourcing of gender-equality work to private consultancy firms. I then use this case-study as a back-drop for a discussion on an on-going project that concerns the possibilities for democracy in a situation characterised by right-wing populism and neoliberal governing practices. What does it mean for democracy that an increasingly larger part of public responsibility now is both planned and implemented by private actors?
Bio: Malin Rönnblom is a Professor of Political Science, Karlstad University and a Senior Lecturer in Gender Studies at Umeå University. Her current research focuses on critical policy studies of gender equality, growth and rural/urban policies, and on practices of governing in an era of finalization and marketization of the state. Her recent publications include “In the Business of Feminism: Consultants as Sweden’s New Gender Equality Workers”, in European Journal of Politics and Gender (2019) with Elisabeth Olivius. Together with Chris Hudson and Katherine Teghtsoonian she published Gender, Governance and Feminist Analysis: Missing in Action? (Routledge 2017).

Hadley Zaun Renkin, CEU – 06.05.2020

Time and place: 15:00-17:00, Room 3A340

Title: Racial/Gender/Sexual Biopolitics in Hungary: Heteronationalism, Homonationalism, and Resistance on Europe’s Geotemporal Edge

Abstract: The geotemporal meanings of Central and Eastern Europe (CEE) have long woven together, and been woven together by, a complex mix of racial, gender, and sexual politics. A key constitutive internal European Other, defined as less developed and civilized, the region’s inhabitants were marked through these categories as biopolitically inferior subjects in the West’s scientific-administrative taxonomies. The same categories were instrumentalized within the CEE region as well, to both claim modern Europeanness and defy it. More recently, these borders of belonging have been reinscribed in both Western readings of homophobia as a particularly regional problem, and regional reactions to these. Drawing on ethnographic fieldwork in Hungary since 1999, this paper traces against these sedimented backgrounds the complex patterns of racial/gender/sexual friction shaping both increasing heteronationalism and LGBTQ movements in postsocialist Hungary. Viktor Orbán’s right-wing, Fidesz government has welded together racist anti-immigrant, anti-feminist/”gender ideology,” and anti-queer discourses and practices to reassert Hungary’s renewed identity as protector of a National, Christian, traditionally gendered, and heterosexual Europe. Yet LGBTQ reactions to right-wing homophobic politics and violence have also reshaped the Budapest Pride March and Hungary’s LGBTQ movement in ways that at once reinforce and challenge the biopolitical borders of “national” and “transnational.” I argue that comparison of these discursive and material entanglements can help us to better understand the profoundly intertwined biopolitics of nationalism and its resistance, and the deeply shared racial/gender/sexual boundaries - past/present, East/West, heteronational/queer - that continue to divide, yet inescapably bind together, “Nation” and “Europe.”

Bio: Hadley Zaun Renkin is Assistant Professor in Gender Studies at the Central European University. His work centers on postsocialist East European sexual politics and sexuality’s implications for changing conceptions of citizenship. He is particularly interested in the regional rise of public homophobia, and its role in reemerging European neo-Orientalist moral geographies. His new research focuses on how the relationships between early ethnography, evolutionary theory, and sexology have shaped modern categories of identity and citizenship. He has published on postsocialist homophobia and Hungarian LGBT history-making, and is revising the manuscript for a book, ‘Gay, Hungarian, Human’: Space, Time, and Sexual Citizenship in Postsocialist Hungary, an ethnographic study of the emergence of Hungary’s LGBT movement, how it has used national and transnational temporalities and geographies to assert multiple forms of belonging, and the resistance its claims have faced.
Title: Trans*forming Care - Trans* and non-binary practices of Community Care

Abstract: This presentation looks at trans and queer notions of care. Utilizing ideas from trans and queer studies, feminist cultural anthropology and ethnographic inquiries, I examine the idea of “care” in relation to trans* community work. In this talk, I wish engage with the political potentials of Care through the lens of my ethnographic study with trans* and non-binary activist communities in Germany and Switzerland. Through this input I want to draw attention to how these practices transform hetero- and cisnormative notions of Care. I will also explore the limits and possibilities of Community Care as way of maintaining solidarity in the wake of precarity and violence.

Bio: Francis Seeck is a PhD candidate at the Institute for European Ethnology at Humboldt University Berlin. Their research interests include Queer and Feminist Anthropology, Trans Studies, Class and Care. They are teaching Gender and Queer Studies at Alice Salomon School for Applied Science and work as an antidiscrimination trainer in the field of classism and gender diversity. Since 2018 they are part of the Institute for Queer Theory in Berlin.